A RECORD OF

Some of the Branches of the Clark Family.

The first ancestor of the Clark family that came to this country from England, was WILLIAM CLARK. He sailed from Plymouth, England, in the ship Mary and John on the 30th of March, 1630, and arrived the 30th of May, following, and was among the first settlers in Dorchester, near Boston. Richard Mather was the first settled minister at Dorchester. In 1659 Eleazer Mather, son of Richard, was preaching at Northampton and the town voted to give a quantity of land to such men as Mr. Mather should invite to come and settle there. William Clark was one of that number and came to Northampton with his family. His wife rode on horseback with two baskets called panniers, slung across the horse, carrying one boy in each basket, and one in her lap, her husband on foot; thus they moved to Northampton, and land was set off to them in 1659. In 1660 was chosen selectman. In 1661, with others, formed the first church in Northampton, and was chosen lieutenant of the train-band, a very important office at that time.

He held other important offices, and died July 19th, 1690, aged eighty-one. He had four sons, William, John, Samuel and Nathaniel. His son John, our ancestor, married his second wife Mary Strong, March 16th, 1679, by whom he had eleven children, six sons and five daughters. The six sons:—

John, born December 28th, 1679.

Nathaniel, born May 13th, 1681.

Ebenezer, born October 18th, 1682.

Increase, born April 8th, 1684.

Noah, born March, 28th, 1694.

Josiah, born June 11th, 1697.

The above six brothers all lived near each other in Northampton, had large families, lived with their wives more than fifty years, and survived them, and all of them were living when the youngest was seventy years old, and all of them lived over eighty years each, one ninety-nine and three of them over ninety years. When the youngest, Josiah, died in 1789 aged ninety-two years, he was the last of the six sons and the five daughters, and at the time of his death there was known to have been descendants of the six brothers only, to the number of 1158 children, grand-children and great-grand-children of whom more than 925 were living.

The following obituary notices of Dea. Clark at the time of his death, are copied from The Amherst Record and The Congregationalist.

DEACON SIMEON CLARK, died in Amherst, Mass., July 31, 1883, aged seventy-six years.

Much that could be said of a truly good man could be said of Deacon Clark. His piety was of a cheerful, steady, faithful character. He always lived up to and adorned his profession. He was constant in his place as a member and officer in the First Church and Sabbath school. A member of that church for over fifty years, and a scholar, teacher or superintendent in the Sabbath school for over sixty-five years. He loved to sing the songs of Zion, and for many years was a leader of the choir and of the singing in the prayer meetings. He always sought and worked for the peace and prosperity of the church and society. Prompt, decided and of excellent judgment, his counsels in the church and town were wise and reliable, and often sought for many a good work. He was so just, true and faithful, that he was honored with many important trusts in the community; settling many estates and befriending the widow and orphan. He was a man of prayer, as his faithful family altar testified, and his voice so often heard in the prayer-meeting.

His faith in God's covenant was strong and steadfast, and his part in keeping it was not lacking. Blessings which he sought through it, descended upon his household, where his influence and example were always judicious and happy. He was a warm friend of missions, and a faithful contributor, remembering the foreign and home mission boards in a legacy. He had a long and painful sickness, which he patiently endured, and passed quietly to his rest and reward, from the house in which he was born and always lived to His house not made with hands eternal in the heavens, where, "far removed from pain and anguish, he is chanting hymns above."

Capt. Simeon Clark died at his residence about 1 o'clock yesterday morning, July 31. He obtained the title of Captain by being chosen a commander of a militia company at the early age of twenty and was a good officer and an uncommonly energetic promising young man. He held the office of captaincy five or six years or until the Amherst militia company was discharged. He has held many important public offices, elected by the town and has been a wise and judicious administrator of many estates. But his efficient services were doubtless not less valuable in the church, in the Congregational society and in the Sunday school, where he was a most useful member for over half a century, and where he led the service of song for over a quarter of a century. He became connected with the church in 1831, and his life and example have exerted an influence for good in this community, such as but very few citizens enjoy. He was born Oct. 15, 1807. May 21, 1828 he married Myra, daughter of Silas Cowles. Four of their nine children are living,—Mrs. Estabrook, wife of Geo. H. Estabrook of Worcester; Rev. A. L. Clark, a Presbyterian pastor in Orange County, New York; Emily A., wife of Rev. F. H. Boynton, pastor of the Congregational church at Rye, N. H.; and Edwin W. Clark who has lived with his father and carried on his farm. His wife died June 8, 1871. Mr. Clark received his education at the old Amherst Academy. His father built the house at Mill Valley in 1780 and it is a fact of more than ordinary occurrence that Capt. Clark was born in this house, lived in it his whole life and within its walls passed to his heavenly reward. His occupation has been principally farming, though he studied field-surveying, and followed it, more or less for forty years. He has been justice of the peace thirty years, selectman, assessor, and overseer of the poor for many years. He was deacon of the First church sixteen years. In politics he has been identified with the Whig and republican parties. A resident of Amherst for a period beyond the allotted time of man, always taking a lively interest in the growth and upbuilding of her institutions, he has lived to see the church of which his grandfather was one of the founders become a rich and prosperous society and a powerful factor in shaping the religious sentiment of the community, and the college, for the first building of which he helped to draw the bricks and sand, grown to rank among the foremost institutions of the land.

At the reception of the First church, tendered to Capt. Clark and Mr. S. C. Carter, on the 9th of last March, several letters were read written by former pastors and former members of the church and old citizens of the town, among which was a letter from Rev. A. M. Colton of Easthampton, from which we quote as follows :

“He was of a hopeful and cheerful make. He lived in ‘Sunny Side.’ I never saw him gloomy and sullen. I never saw a bitter scowl on his face. I never heard a harsh word from his lips. He was gentle unto all. * * * There was no cross-grained timber in his make : nor was there in his house and home. And his home and family were of the happiest and best. * * * And then in the Sabbath school, as teacher or superintendent, in those days and since. * * * And he was so good a man, so judicious, blameless, harmless, consistent, everywhere and always. This “everywhere” should certainly include—should include, perhaps, by eminence Dea. Clark’s long and faithful service in the Sabbath school, as also in the office of Deacon, to which with great unanimity, the church called him, in company with Luke Sweetser of blessed memory. In what I have now said I have not been at all anxious to single out for special mention any one particular form of christian work or services done by Dea. Clark— he was so good altogether, and all around.
